The Transatlantic Academy would like to invite you to join us for a one day workshop on “Brazil and the Liberal World Order.” In this workshop we will consider Brazilian views of the international system, including economic and security aspects, as well as discuss the country’s likely trajectory on these issues going forward. Key questions will include: How does Brazil view the international system, and what would it like to see from the West and in global governance? What can the United States and Europe do to accommodate Brazilian interests and concerns vis-à-vis the liberal world order? To what extent would the world order be liberal given Brazilian preferences?

This workshop is one in a series organized for the Transatlantic Academy’s year on the future of the liberal international order which look at how rising powers view that order and how they would like to see it changed. This workshop is the second in this series following one dealing with India and preceding those planned on China, Turkey, Nigeria and South Africa.

We hope you will be able to join us for this timely discussion.
